

a/e RISK REVIEW

A PUBLICATION OF THE PROFESSIONAL LIABILITY AGENTS NETWORK

Help DRA Go Green!

In an effort to conserve resources, DRA is now offering our a/e Risk Review newsletter in electronic format. If you would like to receive a/e Risk Review electronically, in PDF format, please take a moment to visit our website at www.dealeyrenton.com/subscribe and fill out the form. Or, call us at (510)465-3090.

Indemnities, Part 1: Getting to “No”

The following material is provided for informational purposes only. Before taking any action that could have legal or other important consequences, speak with a qualified professional who can provide guidance that considers your own unique circumstances.

Indemnity agreements between design and environmental firms and their clients can present a minefield of liability risks. By agreeing to a client’s onerous indemnity agreement, your firm may be saddled with virtually all project risks—with many of them uninsured. That’s why it is imperative for you to understand the issues surrounding indemnities and to work with your attorney to ensure that your client agreements do not put you in an untenable position. Your goal is to get to “No” and remove indemnities from your client contracts.

A Little History

The concept of indemnification originated in the construction industry as a method to hold project owners harmless from liabilities that arise during construction. This basic concept makes sense: since the contractor has control of the jobsite, it should indemnify—or hold harmless—the project owner for any site-related liabilities that arise. If a worker or visitor is injured falling into a ditch on a construction site, for example, the contractor is generally held responsible since it controls jobsite safety.

Over time, thanks largely to the efforts of clients and their lawyers, the concept of indemnification has been altered in ways that are inherently unfair to consultants. Architects, engineers and environmental consultants are often asked to sign indemnity agreements that make them assume a large portion of project risks. Indeed, it is not uncommon for design firms to find one or more clauses requiring them to indemnify the client from substantial liabilities for things over which they exercise no control—such as jobsite safety. Likewise, these clauses often make consulting firms liable for their actions and services even when those actions and services are non-negligent and meet the prevailing standard of care.

Many design and environmental professionals concede that they have unwittingly encouraged the use of these onerous indemnifications by accepting them too readily. If they balk at an indemnity, the client may say, “Well, the last firm I used didn’t object to the language.” Fearing they might lose the job, the firm disregards better judgment and signs an indemnity-laden contract.

But before signing on that dotted line, consider:

✓ Client-drafted indemnities may ask you to assume liability for others’ negligent actions. Ask yourself: without the indemnity agreement, whose risk

Continued

from preceding page

would it be? Almost invariably it would be the client's or contractor's risk.

✓ Most client-drafted indemnities are uninsurable. If you sign an indemnity agreement that is not limited to indemnifying the client against your own negligence, you are accepting liability beyond that required by common law. Your professional liability policy likely specifies that your insurance does not cover any liability voluntarily assumed by you under contract unless you would have already been liable in the absence of the contract.

✓ Client-drafted indemnities may require you to pay for your client's legal defense in the event of a claim or lawsuit. This "Duty to Defend" provision could be interpreted as an obligation on your part to pay for an attorney and other legal fees for your client even before any liability for negligence has been alleged or established. In fact, recent court cases in California recently upheld a Duty to Defend provision even though there was no allegation of negligence made against the design firm.

Note: See "California Cases Demonstrate Danger of Duty to Defend Clause" on next page.

✓ Client-drafted indemnities may include inappropriate parties to be indemnified. You should never agree to indemnify a client's agent, contractor, consultant, third party or anyone else who is not directly part of the client entity with which you have a contract. Doing so could create a contractual relationship with these parties (called "privity") and erode the so-called "economic loss doctrine" that protects you from being sued for certain losses by third parties.

Types of Client-Drafted Indemnities

Client-drafted indemnities used in the design and construction industry can be separated into three general types: broad-form, intermediate-form and limited-form.

- Broad-Form Indemnities create the greatest problems. Such an indemnity can make a consulting firm responsible for almost any problem that befalls its client during the project, whether or not the consultant was negligent. A typical broad-form indemnity requires the consultant to agree to hold harmless and indemnify the client from "any and all liability," including the cost of defense, arising out of the performance of professional services.

It is important to note that broad-form indemnities do not limit the indemnification to liability that is the result of the design or environmental professional's negligent acts, errors or omissions. Obviously, such an all-encompassing indemnification covering all of the consultant's actions creates enormous and largely uninsurable liabilities.

In some states, broad-form indemnification has been made illegal by virtue of court decisions or anti-indemnification statutes. But even in states where such indemnities are illegal, a judge might still rule that a given clause is enforceable, or at least partly enforceable, when the parties to the contract have enjoyed relatively equal bargaining strength and the clause is written so clearly that its intent is unmistakable.

- Intermediate-Form Indemnities are not much better than broad-form ones, but they are legal in more jurisdictions. Intermediate-form indemnities provide that a consulting professional will cover the client's risk whenever the consulting professional shares some of the liability due to negligence. A typical intermediate-form indemnity requires the consulting firm to agree to hold harmless and indemnify the client from any and all liability, including cost of defense, arising out of the consultant's negligence, whether it be sole or in concert with others, in connection with performance of contracted services.

Given a clause such as this, the client or contractor could be 99% at fault and, as long as the consultant is at least 1% at fault, the consultant could pick up 100% of the tab. And in the event of a project upset, there is a very good likelihood that a design or environmental consultant would be held at least partly at fault. Virtually any attorney worth his or her salt could convince a public jury that a consulting professional had at least a minor role in a project upset.

- Limited-Form Indemnities assign liability to the parties involved in proportion to the degree of fault. For example, if you are found to be 20% at fault, you will pay 20% of the damages. With a typical limited-form indemnification the consultant agrees to hold harmless and indemnify the client from and against liability arising out of consultant's negligent performance of services.

While this limited-form indemnity is certainly more acceptable than the other

Did you know DRA has an Employee Benefits Department??

We can help you find the best plans for your employees and your budget.

Contact DRA at 510.465.3090 (Oakland),
 714.427.3497 (Santa Ana) or 626.844.3070 (Pasadena)

two, it is best not to have any indemnity in a contract. First, a limited form indemnity is unnecessary since you are already liable for your negligence. Second, such an indemnity could muddy the waters regarding the insurability of any errors and omissions. In addition, even a very limited indemnity clause could result in your firm being held responsible to pay for the client's defense costs.

Just Say No

Regardless of how attractive a potential project may be, your guiding principle should be that you will not accept unlimited or uninsurable liability imposed by a client-written indemnity agreement. You must insist that liabilities remain with those parties who are in the best position to control them. You should do your best to persuade the client to remove any indemnity language that increases your liability beyond the liability you already have for your negligence, errors and omissions. Specifically, be sure you:

- Know the law. Working with your attorney, find out whether your state has anti-indemnification statutes on the books. If so, what do they say and how have the courts interpreted them? Familiarize yourself with any recent state court decisions regarding indemnity agreements. Be aware, however, that the law in your state may not apply to your project dispute. Client-drafted contracts frequently require that disputes be settled in the jurisdiction where the client is located and/or where the work is performed. So become familiar with statutes and rulings in these jurisdictions as well.

- Educate your client. Perhaps the best tactic for getting rid of an unfair indemnity is to demonstrate to the owner the ineffectiveness of such a contractual stipulation. Point out any anti-indemnification statutes on the books in your state or the jurisdiction where any dispute would be tried. Explain that any indemnification that expands your liabilities will be uninsurable and could even jeopardize coverages that would apply without the indemnification.

As your insurance agent, we can help you and your attorney explain to your client that you are already liable for your errors and omissions and any resulting damages are covered within the available limits of your professional liability insurance policy. We'll explain that an indemnity is unnecessary and may cloud the issue of your insurance coverage and legal responsibilities.

- Plead for fairness. Explain that to hold you legally responsible for another's liability is simply unfair. Reaffirm your willingness to accept responsibility for your own negligent acts, errors and omissions but state your unwillingness to be liable for the mistakes

California Cases
Demonstrate Danger of Duty to Defend Clause

A 2010 California court decision clearly demonstrates that Duty to Defend provisions in an Indemnity clause can be upheld in favor of a client even when the consulting firm is not shown to be negligent and meets the prevailing standard of care.

In UDC-Universal Development L.P. v. CH2M Hill, a developer included an Indemnity and Duty to Defend clause in its agreement with its design consultants. The contract stated that the consultants would indemnify the developer from and against any and all claims to the extent they arise out of or are in any way connected with any negligent act or omission by the design firm. The clause went on to state that the design firm agrees to defend the client in any suit, action or demand brought against the client.

A claim was brought against Universal Development by a homeowners association. The developer, in turn, filed a cross complaint against various parties to the project including CH2M Hill alleging the client was damaged due to deficient work. During the court proceeding CH2M Hill argued that it had no duty to indemnify or defend the client unless negligence could be shown.

However, the court ruled that the language of the clause indeed created a duty to defend as soon as defense was tendered, even in the absence of a finding or allegation of negligence. Citing a previous California case (Crawford v. Weather Shield Mfg., Inc.) the court reasoned that the duty to defend was triggered as soon as the claim was made, even if that claim did not allege negligence and even where the consultant was found by the jury to not be at fault!

Based on these two court decisions, it seems that in California, defense obligations will be implied to be included in any indemnity agreement unless the parties clearly indicate otherwise.

This material is provided for informational purposes only. Before taking any action that could have legal or other important consequences, speak with a qualified professional who can provide guidance that considers your own unique circumstances.

© Copyright 2014 by PLAN, the Professional Liability Agents Network. All rights reserved.

- Dealey, Renton & Associates
www.dealeyrenton.com
- 530 Water Street, Seventh Floor
Oakland, California 94607
510.465.3090
Fax 510.452.2193
info@insdra.com
- MAILING ADDRESS:
P.O. Box 12675
Oakland, CA 94604-2675
- 199 S. Los Robles Ave., Suite 540
Pasadena, California 91101
626.844.3070
Fax 626.844.3074
- 3 MacArthur Place, Suite 440
Santa Ana, California 92707
714.427.6810
Fax 714.427.6818
- MAILING ADDRESS:
P.O. Box 10550
Santa Ana, CA 92711-0550

Dealey, Renton & Associates
Insurance Brokers

P.O. Box 12675
Oakland, CA 94604-2675

from preceding page

and oversights of others. Explain that the theory of indemnities applies to contractors on the construction site since they assume control over the work site. Explain how it is unfair to hold a consulting firm responsible for liabilities that are completely out of its control.

Convincing an owner that an indemnification would be unenforceable and/or unfair can be difficult when the client has paid an attorney to draft the contract and the client has been told that another consulting firm will agree to the provision. What do you do when a plea for basic fairness does not work? There are still some options that while not ideal, are far better than accepting a client-drafted indemnity.

Next issue, Part 2 of this two-part report will address those alternatives. Plus we will examine certain cases where you might want to request indemnities from a client, third party or subconsultant.

Can we be of assistance?

We may be able to help you by providing referrals to consultants, and by providing guidance relative to insurance issues, and even to certain preventives, from construction observation through the development and application of sound human resources management policies and procedures. Please call on us for assistance. We're a member of the Professional Liability Agents Network (PLAN).

We're here to help.
(510) 465-3090

Visit our website at
www.dealeyrenton.com

Employment Practices Liability Insurance

Could this happen in your firm:

- Wrongful termination?
- Retaliation?
- Harassment?
- Discrimination?

If you have employees, the answer is YES. We see more claims filed each year by disgruntled employees. Employment Practices Liability Insurance (EPLI) can provide surprisingly affordable protection.

CALL US FOR A QUOTE:

Oakland area: 510.465.3090
Santa Ana area: 714.427.6810
Pasadena area: 626.844.3070

from preceding page

and oversights of others. Explain that the theory of indemnities applies to contractors on the construction site since they assume control over the work site. Explain how it is unfair to hold a consulting firm responsible for liabilities that are completely out of its control.

Convincing an owner that an indemnification would be unenforceable and/or unfair can be difficult when the client has paid an attorney to draft the contract and the client has been told that another consulting firm will agree to the provision. What do you do when a plea for basic fairness does not work? There are still some options that while not ideal, are far better than accepting a client-drafted indemnity.

Next issue, Part 2 of this two-part report will address those alternatives. Plus we will examine certain cases where you might want to request indemnities from a client, third party or subconsultant.

Can we be of assistance?

We may be able to help you by providing referrals to consultants, and by providing guidance relative to insurance issues, and even to certain preventives, from construction observation through the development and application of sound human resources management policies and procedures. Please call on us for assistance. We're a member of the Professional Liability Agents Network (PLAN).

We're here to help.
(510) 465-3090

Visit our website at
www.dealeyrenton.com

Employment Practices Liability Insurance

Could this happen in your firm:

- Wrongful termination?
- Retaliation?
- Harassment?
- Discrimination?

If you have employees, the answer is YES. We see more claims filed each year by disgruntled employees. Employment Practices Liability Insurance (EPLI) can provide surprisingly affordable protection.

CALL US FOR A QUOTE:

Oakland area: 510.465.3090
Santa Ana area: 714.427.6810
Pasadena area: 626.844.3070

Dealey, Renton & Associates
Insurance Brokers

P.O. Box 10550
Santa Ana, CA 92711-0550

from preceding page

and oversights of others. Explain that the theory of indemnities applies to contractors on the construction site since they assume control over the work site. Explain how it is unfair to hold a consulting firm responsible for liabilities that are completely out of its control.

Convincing an owner that an indemnification would be unenforceable and/or unfair can be difficult when the client has paid an attorney to draft the contract and the client has been told that another consulting firm will agree to the provision. What do you do when a plea for basic fairness does not work? There are still some options that while not ideal, are far better than accepting a client-drafted indemnity.

Next issue, Part 2 of this two-part report will address those alternatives. Plus we will examine certain cases where you might want to request indemnities from a client, third party or subconsultant.

Can we be of assistance?

We may be able to help you by providing referrals to consultants, and by providing guidance relative to insurance issues, and even to certain preventives, from construction observation through the development and application of sound human resources management policies and procedures. Please call on us for assistance. We're a member of the Professional Liability Agents Network (PLAN).

We're here to help.
(510) 465-3090

Visit our website at
www.dealeyrenton.com

Employment Practices Liability Insurance

Could this happen in your firm:

- Wrongful termination?
- Retaliation?
- Harassment?
- Discrimination?

If you have employees, the answer is YES. We see more claims filed each year by disgruntled employees. Employment Practices Liability Insurance (EPLI) can provide surprisingly affordable protection.

CALL US FOR A QUOTE:

Oakland area: 510.465.3090
Santa Ana area: 714.427.6810
Pasadena area: 626.844.3070